Patricia Cunningham developed the Making Words activity while working with Title I teachers in North Carolina. In 1991 she wrote "Phonics They Use: Words for Reading and Writing" which is currently available in its fourth edition. According to Allyn and Bacon, Phonemic awareness includes the ability to recognize that words are made up of a discrete set of sounds and the ability to manipulate sounds.

MAKING Making Words (Cunningham & Cunningham, 1992) is an activity that can be used in the Working with Words Block. Children are given letter tiles to make words (beginning with short words and building to larger words). After making the words, children then sort and look for spelling patterns and sets of rhymes.

MAKING - Jefferson County Public Schools

Making Words (Cunningham & Hall, 1994, 1997) is an activity designed to teach students to look for spelling patterns in words and recognize the differences that result when a single letter is changed. Teachers guide students in manipulating their individual set of six to eight letters to create words.
